Many a traveler has inscribed his name upon the famous sycamore, known as the Virgin's Tree, at Heliopolis, where Arabi is now throwing up his intrenchments for the defense of Cairo. The rude buffets of time and the embellishments of the tourist have dealt hardly with its trunk, but its branches are still flourishing. According to the legend the Virgin and Child once rested under its friendly shade during the flight to Egypt. Another story tells how Mary concealed herself with the child in the hollow of the trunk, and that a kindly spider so completely covered the opening with its web as to "screen her effectually from observation." It was presented by the Khedive to the Empress Eugenie at the inauguration of the canal. The unfortunate part of the tale is that the tree now shown as the real article was not planted until about 1672, the tree of the fable having died a natural death in 1675.
